

News from Women in the Fastener Industry

Women in the Fastener Industry (WIFI) is excited to announce that Jan Morr, VP of WIFI, has accepted a position as the Regional Sales Manager at Würth House of Threads, an operating company of Würth Industry North America (WINA).

Her role will cover Würth business throughout the Midwest. Jan has been in the fastener industry for 11 years. Her career has encompassed manufacturing of structural bolts to currently selling for a division of the world's largest fastener distributor. She has also been an integral part of WIFI, an organization built around women supporting women. WIFI is a wonderful non-profit organization that mentors, trains, and empowers women in the fastener industry.

It is not surprising that Jan accepted the position at Würth. As one of the premier industrial distributors in the United States, offering a wide range of products and services from standard to specialty fasteners, inventory management, engineering assistance, and more, the company offered her an excellent opportunity to advance her career in the fastener industry.

Jan will be working inside WINA's newly formed Construction Services Division, comprising Würth companies House of Threads, Weinstock Bros, Würth Action Bolt, and recently acquired Atlantic Fasteners. The new division is backed by over 230 years of experience and will service the construction industry with structural fasteners, safety equipment and PPE, inventory management solutions, manufacturing capabilities, and more.
